Commissioner Copps:

Dear FCC Commissioner,

Hello. My name is Walter Podejko. I am a stepfather of a ten year-old son, and I work hard at keeping him from offensive programming. That is a monumental task, considering that almost every cartoon has violence in every episode. Today, unlike in times and cartoons past, the way to stop criminal behavior, which is a good thing, is through violent action against the criminals involved. It is the "might makes right" attitude that makes me nervous for my son. I remember shows in the sixties and seventies that stopped crime by having characters use their brains and call in the authorities. Today, it is hard to tell the good guys from the bad guys, because the language is awful and hurtful and sometimes vulgar and offensive, and that is coming from the so-called good guys. We are still only talking about cartoons. Movies that are geared for the ten and older crowd are filled with sexually suggestive come-on statements and skimpy attire and flirtatious exchanges from the girls in movies, sitcoms and even cartoons. This is a heartwrenching situation for our family. We are Christians and we would like to allow our son to stay innocent and pure for as long as we can, but even the violence is a big negative factor. Yesterday, my son said some kids were picking on him, and he said to a few of them, "keep it up, and you'll see what happens to you". Needless to say, I challenged him not to speak like that, but to get an older person involved. He did, and the other boys ended up begging not to be kicked out of the camp by the leaders. They've left my son alone since he went to the people in charge. Violent behavior is everywhere in media, and it's making an impression on kids everywhere. Please try to put an end to violent programming for the sake of the future of American kids. They will thank you some day for it.

Sincerely,

Walter Podejko

Commissioner Abernathy:

Thank you for taking the time to read this e-mail. I am writing to you as a concerned mother of 3 children - ages 16, 5 and 2.

I am concerned about the terrible amount of violence that is currently on television. I believe that things have gotten so out of control that I feel nothing but revulsion whenever I see these shows being aired. My husband and I refuse to let any of our children (let alone ourselves) view any of these programs. Nothing is sacred any longer - not even children's cartoons.

We believe that over time - not only are the images frightening inofthemselves but if viewed over time anyone, not just children, become desensitized to the violence that they see. It takes more and more to get a "rise" out of them as a result. Is this what we want for our society? Do we want them to believe that violence is the norm?

I don't believe that we do so I am asking you to please carefully review these programs before they are allowed to air. Please allow the wants of the many to overrun the wants of the few.

Let's encourage family oriented television!

Sincerely,

To whom it may concern:

As a mother of three children I have to basically turn the TV off! Between the violence and the sex, TV is not for children or adults for that matter. TV used to be concerned with values and morals, but these days TV seems to have no heart or concern. This bothers me greatly to the point that I just leave the tube off!

It is a shame that in the evening parents can't sit down to watch a reasonable show without experiencing violence, sex, homosexuality, crude language and other offensive gestures.

I think it is time for TV to get back to Andy Griffin era and good, clean movies. I remember as a child having movie night and watching the Hallmark or Disney movies with my family. Those are memories that are few and far between now due to -- you never know what might pop up next. It is a shame that we have to seek and search out movie rentals for our family just to watch TV.

I take a stand against TV and the shows that are being produced. Producers and Commissioners need to examine the shows and obviously their hearts. Killing, sex, immoral acts and crude language just do not get it in our house. AS for me and my house we will serve the Lord! In our house we watch SKY Angel channels. We chose to fill our mind with good things. I urge you to change what is on TV this day in time. It is imperative for our future!

Thank you,
L. Wagner
